“ Our sincere sympathies to the family and friends of David Lloyd. We knew David only through an exchange of letters and one brief visit a few years ago sometime after the death of his dear wife. We shared in common with him a love and respect for the Dragoon Mountains and particularly Cochise Stronghold. During our surprise visit, David, a gracious host, was most generous with his time and information as he provided two virtual strangers a tour of his unforgettable Canyon House and mountain-side property. He expressed such a deep connection and seeming reverence for the area and its history. He was inspiring.

We had so hoped to visit David again, and perhaps walk together on one of his treasured trails. He is gone now (gone ahead?), but we are sure he would remind us, the "Apache Spirit Is Forever".

“ To say David was a character would be an understatement. In addition to his quick wit, he was one of the nicest people I ever met. He wasn't shy about sharing his opinion, and initially he could be intimidating when discussing church finances or improvements - he was on the board, I was the bookkeeper. But over time, and getting to know him a little better, I regretted not knowing him and Lonnie sooner. He missed her tremendously when she passed, and I always had the feeling he was marking time until they could be together again. He was one of St. Jude's special gifts, and is missed.
