“ Nearly one year you are in another world now. I can't be another place than heaven, where you might be now. Me and my son, we were lucky to meet you, and it was a feeling you were the grandfather we both never had.

Thank the fate who brought us together for a short time, and we will never forget your humor, your strenght, your positve attitude to your live you lived and your loveableness. You are leaving an unforgettable mark in our hearts which will last forever.

*Thank you for every encounter - it was an inestimable gift for us.

“ A few years ago I went over to visit Joe at his house. He invited me in for coffee. We sat and talked at his kitchen table. He offered me another cup from his old percolater pot. It tasted so good I had a second cup. It was around two when I left. That coffee kept me up until at least four am the next day. It was worth it for the stories he shared!

“ Joe worked for Kenny and Elizabeth Gunter for a long time years ago near Cochise. Joe told me several years ago in Willcox that he was the last man to rope a calf off of the great horse Red Man, when Red Man as old and pretty crippled. But Joe said he took out after that one calf like he was a totally sound young horse.

Rest in Peace, Joe.
