“ I remember when you came to Phoenix for a visit and we introduced you to Jack. We spent most holidays with you, Jack, Aunt Gin and Uncle Fat. When Wayne died no words could calm my pain until I read a poem by Kahlil Gibran. It goes as follows: For what is it to die but to stand naked in the wind and to melt into the sun? And what is it to cease breathing but to free the breath from its restless tides, that it may rise and expand and seek God unencumbered?

Only when you drink from the river of silence shall you indeed sing. And when you have reached the mountain top, then you shall begin to climb.

And when the earth shall claim your limbs, then shall you truly dance.

June I hope you are climbing that mountain and dancing. I told Wayne to watch for you and show you the ropes.
