“ Louise or Louly as Jim called her, and I were friends since we both worked at the Willcox Clinic for Dr. Combs and Dr. Kleman in the early 1970's. After my first husband Bud Hood died in 1972 they were my lifeline, I spent a lot of time with them. After I moved away in 1974 Louise and I remained friends. She was the type of friend that it didn't matter how long since we had last spoken or seen each other, we just picked up where we left off. I saw her in May and she had lost weight and looked fabulous. I will miss her friendship more than she can ever know. I know she is in a better place and finally not in pain.

“ This memory is for the family of Louise Coleman, but I will write it as if I am talking straight to her. Well, Louise, I guess you are ahead of me in seeing Jesus. The last time we talked, about two weeks ago, do you remember that we talked about how loving and how kind Jesus is? You told me that you were not afraid to die and I said the same. We each talked about that we are not so steady on our feet as we get older and we each said to be careful not to fall as the last thing we said in our conversation. We each told the other one about our special prayer requests and of course I knew that you would remember to talk with God about my requests as I have talked to God about yours. You told me that you were not afraid to die because in the very next instant after death you knew that you would be with Jesus and that was a super wonderful thing to look forward to. I will miss you so much Louise. We had planned to go to lunch as soon as I moved to Tucson. I was looking forward to yapping with you and laughing. Well, that will have to wait until it is my turn to see Jesus. I keep looking toward the sky because I know that He could come back at any time, except now I look upward and know that you are up there with him and how sweet it must be. I do not wish for you to be back here. However, my heart misses you deeply. I love you my sister in Christ and I will keep looking upward, never forgetting you and always praising my Lord's name. With all my love, I cherish the friendship that we had.
