“ Neidra and I became best friends when my mother met her mother and they became best friends. Many times I would go spend the weekend with her, her sister Vicki and her parents on their farm and we kids found great fun in jumping into the cotton trailers filled with cotton. Neidra and I would go horse back riding on a horse that belonged to someone that wanted him exercised. Now that horse was loco as he could be. One day while riding bareback and riding double, he put his head down and started bucking. We got bucked off, she broke her wrist, I got the side of my face rearranged when hitting the caliche dirt around Pecos. But we still loved riding. Eventually we got our own horses and all the kids with horses would ride out into the desert and we would roast wieners and marshmallows on the open fire. We all found great pleasure in playing tag while riding bareback in farmers' fields of alfalfa . We also quite often would walk to the theater downtown and watch scary movies and then be scared all night, knowing the zombies were out there. We trick or treated together. For all of us kids, the world was our oyster back then. Those were the good old days when kids could be kids without being worried about anything happening to them. Eventually we all got older, and before we knew it we were going separate ways. I lost track of Neidra after my husband and I moved to El Paso, Texas but always wondered what happened to her and her family. The world has now lost a beautiful soul with a smile that could light up a room. She will be very missed.
